

The Finite State Machine we used is a Moore machine. The reasoning behind it being a Moore machine is due to the fact our next states are determined based on the present state without an influence from the present input. We only care about the input while in the idle state, and once we move to the next states we stop reading inputs, hence newer inputs added during that time would not affect the outcome of our module.